

The Northwestern University Conference on Human Rights, KAN-WIN
& The Asian American Studies Program at Northwestern University present

Our Sisters are Not for Sale:

Examining the issue and implications of Asian trafficked victims into the U.S.

A speaker panel offering cutting edge research and best practices for the community to address Asian trafficked victims into the U.S. and Chicago, while making big picture connections to the dehumanization of and violence against Asian women and girls. This is the first step for Asian community organizers to meet and strategize with the city's main task forces addressing the trafficking agenda for future collaboration and useful networking opportunities.

Panelists

Rachel Durchslag

Executive Director, Chicago Alliance
Against Sexual Exploitation

Kaitlyn Lim

Coordinator, Polaris Project,
Los Angeles

Timothy Lim

Professor of Asian Studies, Cal State,
Los Angeles

Bing Luo

Immigrant Services Advocate, National
Immigrant Justice Center/Heartland Alliance

Kavitha Sreeharsha

Staff Attorney, Legal Momentum

The Panel will be moderated by

Ji-Yeon Yuh

Director, Asian American Studies Program,
Northwestern University

Thursday — February 7, 2008

6:30 Reception/7:00 Panel

McCormick Tribune Center Forum
Northwestern University, Evanston

Sponsored by KAN-WIN • The Asian American Studies Program, Northwestern University • Department of History, Northwestern University • Northwestern University Conference on Human Rights • Department of Sociology, Northwestern University • Additional funding provided by The Initiative For Comparative Race & Diaspora

For information: Asian American Studies Program, Northwestern University: 847.467.7114 • asianamerican@northwestern.edu • <http://www.asianamerican.northwestern.edu/> KAN-WIN: 773.583.1392 • info@kanwin.org • <http://www.kanwin.org/index.html>